Subject: Call for nominations – 2022 UNESCO King Hamad Bin Isa Al-Khalifa Prize for the Use of Information and Communication Technologies in Education

Dear Minister,

It is my pleasure to inform you that nominations are now open for the 2022 edition of the UNESCO King Hamad Bin Isa Al-Khalifa Prize for the Use of Information and Communication Technologies in Education.

Established in 2005 with support from the Kingdom of Bahrain, the Prize rewards projects that use innovative technologies to enhance learning and teaching.

The 2022 edition of the Prize will focus on the theme "The use of public platforms to ensure inclusive access to digital education content". It will reward projects that have made digital learning platforms and digital content more accessible, as well as those that have promoted universal connectivity in education and the development of digital competencies for all teachers and learners.

In this way, the new edition builds on the conclusions of the Transforming Education Summit, held in September 2022 during the United Nations General Assembly. At the summit, participating States reaffirmed that digital technologies should not widen but reduce learning gaps – and, to this end, digital resources should be made available to all.

Two prize-winners will be chosen based on the recommendations of an international jury. Each will receive a diploma and a monetary award of US $25,000.

Applications must be submitted online in English or French by 23 January 2023 at the latest. UNESCO encourages Member States to set up a national selection process and present up to three candidates via their National Commission.

More information about the theme of the 2022 edition and application procedures are available at the following link: http://on.unesco.org/aboutictprize.

The 2022 edition follows immediately the release of "Call to Action: Assuring and improving quality public digital learning for all" during the Transforming Education Summit (TES) in September 2022, which reaffirms that the digital revolution must be harnessed to ensure the provision of quality education and lifelong learning as a public good and a human right for all, with a particular focus on the most marginalized. The 2022 edition, therefore, focuses on three keys to universal public digital education, rewarding projects that have made public digital learning platforms and digital content universally accessible, developed digital competencies for all teachers and learners, and promoted universal connectivity in education.
